Powerlifting provides the ultimate test of physical strength. The first AAU Powerlifting meets began around 1963 under the auspices of the Weightlifting program, but Powerlifting was soon recognized as a separate sports. It remained so until Powerlifting officially left the AAU in 1981 as a result of restructuring in the AAU, promoted by The Amateur Sports Act of 1978. With the tremendous interest that this sport has generated over the past thirty plus year, Powerlifting returned to the AAU in 1995. In it's 11th year, the AAU program has registered several thousand athletes, recruited over 50 meet directors, sanctioned over 110 meets, including several national and world invitational championships, and conducted the first-ever Powerlifting competition at the prestigious AAU Junior Olympic Games.

Powerlifting offers a way to test one's physical strength. Competition revolves around three lifts: the squat, bench press, and the deadlift; either as individual lifts or combined as a total. Each lifter is allowed three attempts in each lift and the highest successful attempt is added to the total to determine the winner in a particular weight class and age group.

Athletic Strength Powerlifting competition is also offered to high school and college sport programs. This differs from traditional Powerlifting primarily in the squat and bench as they are scored on the basis of multiple repetitions rather than a single maximum lift. Also, the powerclean replaces the deadlift. This tests the athlete's strength and endurance simultaneously.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

The AAU Powerlifting Program is dedicated to promoting, developing, and expanding the current programs for lifters of all ages in Equipped (using supportive gear) and RAW (no supportive gear, only a belt).

The dates and information posted on this brochure are for informational purposes only and are subject to change without notice. Please check the AAU website www.aausports.org for the most up to date information.

POWERLIFTING

Squat: The lifter takes the weighed bar from the uprights of the supporting rack. When set, the lifter receives the command, verbal and visual, to "squat", they then descend until the hip joint is lower than the top of the knees. The lifter then returns to an upright position. When the lifter receives the signal to "rack it", the weighted bar is returned to the uprights. Bench: While lying on the bck the lifter removes a weighted bar, with assistance if necessary, from the upright supports of the bench, and lowers the bar to the chest. When the bar is motionless, a verbal command is given to "rack", the weight and the bar is returned to the uprights.

Deadlift: A weighted bar is placed on the platform before the lifter. The lifter bends/squats down to grasp the bar with both hands and attempts to stand erect. When completely erect, the command, verbal and visual, "down" is given and the bar is lowered, under control, to the platform.

Total: While each of the above lifts may be contested individually in specialty meets, when all three are done in the same meet (Equipped or RAW) the best successful attempt in eachlift are added together for a total. The highest total in each weight class/age group category wins.

Referees

A comprehensive program has been established to train referees. AAU Powerlifting Referees must pass a written and practical test. The program also provides for advancement opportunities for our referees at the following levels: State, National and International. Promotions are based solely on performance and testing results over a prescribed time period.

Referees from the USPF, USAPL, APF and prior AAU Weightlifting/Powerlifting Committee members may be grandfathered after submitting a resume.

Grandfathering does not automatically grant referee status. Each individual resume is handled on a caseby-case basis.
